End product

TENCEL® is a natural, man made fibre which also have a generic name Lyocell . It is extracted from wood and is 100% bio-degradable. The wood used is taken from tree farms which practice sustainability and this is guaranteed by the PEFC quality seal and the international FDS and FSC (Forest Stewardship Council).

TENCEL® came from Eucalyptus tree that grown with minimum treatments and no pesticides. Eucalyptus tree makes the use of photosynthesis which we all know been an important mechanism in nature and the basis for life on earth.

And it is grown in the forest plantations which are not suitable for agriculture, in contrast to cotton that uses productive agricultural land meaning competing with food production . Therefore production of TENCEL® does not requires high energy consumption which is our current global problem.

Wood pulp being dissolved in a non toxic organic recovered and reused solvent , thus using an extrusion method through tiny holes comes Lyocell fibers.

This method is referred to as a closed loop process, meaning in the case of TENCEL® Lyocell, more than 99% of the solvent is recovered and reused, all of this leading to less land and water usage. No harmful chemicals are used in the manufacturing process. Above all, for the garment industry TENCEL® has a reputation for being extremely eco-friendly and environmentally sustainable.
